Alea, Heria, Kaneohe, Wahiawa, Wai-alea, Ewa, Wai-pahu, and Kahuku. The entire island was divided into 16 districts and two or more men sent to each one. Japanese and Chinese insurance men, representative of the big companies here, are also working in the Oriental section of the city with excellent results.

In doing this work the insurance men are receiving nothing in return. They have dropped their own work and have undertaken the job of selling Liberty bonds simply because of patriotism and civic pride.

All over the country tomorrow will be "Women's Day" in the campaign to sell the Liberty bonds and the women of Honolulu are asked to aid. Every woman can help by putting her savings into a Liberty bond and encouraging the men of her family to do the same thing. If not able to subscribe for a large amount at least pay a $50 bond.

Saturday is to be known here as "Soldier's Day," and a special effort will be made to get the officers and enlisted men to subscribe. General F. S. Strong, commander of the Hawaiian department, has sent a letter to all posts calling attention to the day and recommending that officers and men subscribe. He also instructed that notices be posted on all company bulletin boards.

To aid in this work the banks have agreed to take subscriptions from the soldiers allowing them to pay 10 per cent down and the rest in monthly payments of not less than $5. It was reported today that many firms have purchased bonds for all their employees with arrangements for the employees to pay in weekly or monthly installments.

"Blind Pigging" Is Jolted; Irwin Deals Out Heavy Penalty

"Blind-pigging" in Honolulu suffered a severe setback this morning when Judge Harry Irwin fined Annie Kamala $250 and costs and sentenced her to one month in prison for selling liquor without a license.

In a similar case of Robert Nuuhika, who was accused of selling liquor in the Kama'u woman's place, the sentence was considerably less, only a $200 fine and no imprisonment. But even this is twice as much as the usual sentence in the past.

Before Judge Irwin gave his decision he spoke at length from the bench on the liquor evil and declared that a severe penalty was necessary in the case before him inasmuch as the woman evidently had been conducting a notorious resort.

The judge drew attention to the fact that local liquor dealers who paid for licenses to sell liquor had recently voluntarily closed their places of business at an earlier hour and declared it was unfair to them and to the general public to let unlicensed competitors off easily.

Attorney Leon M. Straus, appearing for the defendants, asked what the bond would be in case of an appeal. Another shock came when the judge said "$500."

Several officers, including Lt. John Hutton, declared the judge's decision would prove a most effective check to promiscuous liquor selling.

CLAIM FOR RIGHT TO VOTE IS BEFORE COURT

An important case now pending in supreme court is that of Manuel Oliveira Sanchez, a Porto Rican, whose petition for mandamus to compel the county clerk to allow him to register as a voter recently was denied by Circuit Judge Kemp. Sanchez took the case to supreme court on a writ of error. It probably will not be argued before June 24. The first brief is due June 9.

The case of Eugene Murphy against the Maui Publishing Co., an action involving alleged libel, is also before the upper court, and it is uncertain when argument will be had. The lower court found for the plaintiff and the defendant took the case up on a writ of error. Seven cases are on the supreme court calendar for argument this month.

"Why?"

BOURBONS LOOK TO COMPROMISE TO GET 50-50 PATRONAGE SPLIT

Principal Fight Expected to Center Around Fire Chief,
Engineer and Water Supt.

That the Democratic party is going to make a strong fight to land as many city plums for the members of its own party as possible is apparent from the attitude taken today by well known Democrats.

While the Democrats appreciate the fact that a large number of Republican appointees now in office will be kept there if possible by the five Republican members of the board, they hope through compromise and concessions at least to break even.

The principal fight it is expected will center around the positions of fire chief, city engineer and superintendent of the water and sewer department, held now by C. H. Thurston, George N. Collins and Harry Murray, respectively. It was rumored this morning that the Bourbons would attempt to do away entirely with the position of superintendent of water and sewer.

Department heads and organizations who will automatically go out of office with the installation of the new mayor and board are, beside those already named, William Frazee, superintendent of the electric light department; Henry Freitas, building inspector; William Ayler, superintendent of the garbage department; John Wise, superintendent of Kapiolani Park; E. K. Vierra, superintendent of the entire park system; the civil service commission, composed of Nao W. Aluli, chairman, Edward Fogarty and William J. Sheldon, and the city planning commission.

Frazee, Freitas and Vierra, it is declared, will probably be retained as will no doubt the city planning commission, but the rest are open to compromise.

One compromise which is being talked of is to create the position of road supervisor and allow the Bourbons to name the man.

SALOONKEEPERS WARNED NOT TO SELL LIQUOR TO UNIFORMED MEN

private home and be given liquor. he secures the liquor lawfully because no sale has been made. For the same reason, he says, the host cannot be held liable under the new law.

One question which has been raised with regard to the new law is whether the sale of liquor to an army or navy man not in uniform is a violation. The district attorney holds it is not a violation if the man is not in uniform.

In this respect, however, he points out that the only time an enlisted man is allowed to wear civilian clothing is when he is given special permission by his superior officer on some special occasion. Another point raised is that a bartender, selling liquor to a soldier in civilian clothes, would not likely know that the purchaser was a soldier.

"This new law is to be enforced just the same as any other federal law," says Attorney Huber. "It stands in no different situation than any other law. It is just a plan law, nothing more, and must be obeyed and enforced."

Naval officers and men ashore, says Huber, wear the uniform of the United States and the new law applies to them as well as to soldiers and sailors stationed on land. The language of the law is "members of the United States forces," and the district attorney holds that the navy is included in the term.

May Not Affect Hawaii Guard
As regards members of the National Guard coming within the provisions of the law, the U. S. attorney says this would depend on whether the guard was in the national service and under the direct orders of the president as executive head of the army. "I do not believe the law would apply to the national guardsmen under other conditions," says Huber, "and the guardsmen are required to wear the uniform only on certain occasions."

ANTI-SALE LAW AFFECTS GUARD

lose heavily, and some of them will probably be forced out of business.

"An interpretation by government officials of the 'no liquor' provision of the military draft law made yesterday rules that no alcoholic beverage may be sold or given to any member of the armed forces of the country. This is held to apply both to officers and privates. As the wording of the measure specifically refers to 'selling' liquor, it was believed in some quarters that the giving away of liquor or 'treating' did not come within the meaning of the draft provision. United States District Attorney Marshall after discussing this feature with Attorney-General Gregory, over the telephone to Washington, announced:

"Any attempt at technical evasion of the military prohibition law will be met with immediate prosecution. The words 'selling' and 'serving' are held to be synonymous." Mr. Marshall added that the same application would apply in all cases similar to that of buying or giving liquor to a minor or a child."

Then follows a quotation of that section of the law which gives the president discretion for its enforcement at any place.

"For the first time in years sailors in Brooklyn were unable to get liquors at any place within miles of the navy yard. As officers and enlisted men in all branches of the service are required to wear service uniforms on all occasions, there is no way for them to evade the law. It is expected, however, that there may be some violations, as, for instance, where civilians may buy bottles of liquors and secretly hand the contents over to the uniformed men."

Some Varying Interpretations of Law
That national guardsmen and reserve officers may come within the scope of the new anti-liquor-selling provisions was the gist of opinions of a number of congressmen at the time the law went into effect.

Now received here from Washington says that several members of congress held that national guardsmen or reserve officers would be taking a chance of getting into trouble.

Until national guardsmen are sworn in as part of the federal forces, they might not be considered strictly a part of the U. S. military forces, but this is a moot question, it was held in Washington.

Huber says he is uncertain as to whether the Hawaii guard is now in the national service, and does not think that the law would apply until the guard actually is in such service, when it would become a part of the federal troops.

"Of course there is a sort of federal supervision at all times," he adds, "but that is not what is meant in this particular instance."

That bartenders and other dealers in liquor must obey the law, as there are absolutely no loopholes yet brought to light, is the opinion of the district attorney. He adds, however, that this law, the same as all other laws, is subject to the interpretation of the courts.

"But it looks to me like a very well drawn statute," he says.

As the new law does not make it an offense to "give" liquor to the stipulated persons, Attorney Huber is of the opinion that it was not the intent of congress to carry the statute to the extreme by including sociable drinking.

The penalty for violating any of the provisions of the section relating to the sale of liquor is heavy. It provides a fine of not more than $1000 or imprisonment for not more than 12 months, or both.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE REJOICES AT SALE LAW

Regarding the operation of the law prohibiting the sale of liquor to army officers and men in uniform, Secretary G. W. Paty of the Anti-Saloon League said today:

"The league is highly gratified because this law is now to be enforced in Hawaii. We had been expecting action here ever since regulations went into effect applying to soldiers in Texas."

Mr. Paty says the league has no information to the effect that the President might set aside Honolulu as a strictly "dry" area for the period of the war.

May 21 says that the general opinion of attorneys in that city was that it is not against the law to sell to a civilian who is accompanied by a soldier or an officer. If this view is upheld, "treating" a soldier or officer is allowable.

The law, furthermore, does not apply to the sale of liquor to sailors of the U. S. navy, according to a statement in the Star.

"The prohibition against the sale to men in uniforms applies only, thus far, to the army, no enactment having been passed with reference to the naval forces. In several of the local clubs, it is stated, officers of the legislature Maui senators moved against confirming the appointments of these three, the senate carrying the various motions.

FIGURES NOT YET KNOWN

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 7.—Complete figures on the military registration of last Tuesday have been received thus far only from Vermont, Delaware and the District of Columbia. Figures received from other states are too scant to base upon them an accurate estimate of the total number of men who registered throughout the country.

It is expected, however, the complete returns will be received from the majority of the states today.

In some cities registration is still going on, registration cards having been lacking on Tuesday.

FOUR ISLANDS HOME OF 5915 AUTOMOBILES

The June issue of the Honolulu, the chamber of commerce publication, came out today with some interesting articles. A patriotic appeal to serve the flag as well as to fly it appears on the front page. The Saving of Daylight is discussed.

Museum Gets Priceless Gift From South Sea

A priceless gift of South Sea ethnological collections and other objects of historic and scientific interest has been made to the Bishop Museum by T. L. Young, a noted Australian, according to a statement this morning by Francis L. Green, who has been authorized by Young to make the announcement. Mr. Young has already given several valuable collections to the museum and has now decided to augment this materially.

He is managing director of Henderson, Macfarlane & Co., a large agency covering Australasia and the South Seas, and is one of the world's recognized authorities on South Sea ethnology. He is accredited with being the greatest authority on Easter Island and its famous inscriptions.

POLITICAL RUMOR BUSY WITH YARN ABOUT JOHN WISE

Political rumor was busy today, as an election aftermath, with the story that John H. Wise not only did a good deal to help the cause of Joe Fern for mayor, but is seriously considering aligning himself with the Democratic party. The basis of the rumor could not be learned, but Wise was generally credited with having done nothing to help the cause of his fellow Republican, John Lane, in the race for mayor, and it was said that Wise is still bitter over his defeat in the primaries for the Republican sheriff nomination.

Another rumor in political circles is that Jesse Ululhi, defeated Bourbon candidate for supervisor, may land the job which Joe Fern leaves to step into the mayor's office, namely that of city jailer. Ululhi wants the job, it is declared, and Link McCandless would be likely to help get it for him.

William Miles, who was Fern's secretary when Fern was mayor, is expected to be his secretary again if he wants the job, but many say that "Billy" is kept busy with private affairs and does not seek the secretaryship.

3 MAGISTRATES STAY IN OFFICE

Philip Pall, H. E. Palakiko and Joseph Anjo, three district magistrates on the island of Maui whose appointments were unconfirmed by vote of the territorial senate early last month will remain in office until their respective terms expire.

According to the opinion of the attorney general the three men must remain in office for the two years of their terms, and Governor Pinkham is practically powerless to expel them. "The attorney general holds relative to district magistrates," said the governor today, "that they retain their position for two years from date of commission. Hence these three Maui magistrates will legally hold their places so long as they properly perform their functions."

All three terms are to expire in 1918: Pall's on April 1, Palakiko's on July 1 and Anjo's on August 30. On the closing night of the legislature Maui senators moved against confirming the appointments of these three, the senate carrying the various motions.

GERMANS BEHIND CHINA TROUBLES, SAYS JOURNALIST

Pro-German feeling shows strongly in China; the army is even now offered largely by Germans; and the central civil government fears to break with Berlin because the army may not follow the lead and the internal revolt may be disastrous.

Such are the conclusions of W. Fraser, well known newspaperman of the Far East, who is in Honolulu today on his way to England and Scotland, after a number of years in China. He has been with the Shanghai Mercury for a considerable time and is well informed on Chinese politics.

President Li is in a dilemma, he comments. He knows the government should go in with the Allies but the German influence in the army is so strong that such a course may lead to disaster. I know personally that the Germans are strong with the army and with the military governors. The government is certainly in a bad spot and what will come out of it no one knows.

He believes that one of the strong men in China today is Vice-President Feng Ko Chan, but says he does not know whether this man will risk the opposition of the army to go in with the Allies. In short, Mr. Fraser feels that the Germans are primarily responsible for China's present position and internal troubles.

Fraser is going home to see if he can go in the army service corps. He tried to get in with the active fighting units but was rejected on account of eye trouble. But he is determined to be of some active service to the cause of the Allies and is going back for another examination.

The cast of characters is as follows: Pan, the god of woods, hill and streams, Miss Beatrice White; Oak, his playmate, Mrs. Alexander Horn; Dryad—Maple, Mrs. Harold Hustace; Elm, Miss Florence Davis; Willow, Miss Amy Coates; Arian, a gypsy from the world without, Miss Pearl Josephson; The Lady of the Moon, Miss Olive Blackshear; Aurora, the spirit of light and morn, Miss Florence White; Mother Nature, Miss Esther White.

TERRITORIAL OFFICIALS ON TRIPS TO COAST

Territorial office heads are becoming as scarce around the Capitol these days as the proverbial hen's teeth, no less than four of the governor's official family being either on the mainland or bound for it.

These are Attorney General I. M. Stainback, latest to leave; Land Commissioner Bertram G. Rivenburgh, Treasurer C. J. McCarthy and Dr. J. S. B. Pratt, president of the board of health.

Governor Pinkham said today that he understands Stainback will spend a portion of his vacation at a reunion of his class at Princeton University.
